4 SPEAK GOOD ENGLISH MOVEMENT

Local blogger shows good English can be entertaining too

Local blogger Mr Brown — best known for his popular podcasts and blog which are often punctuated with Singlish — has been engaged by the Speak Good English Movement to write a story showcasing good English.

Mr Brown, whose real name is Mr Lee Kin Mun, recognises the contradiction but said he would not be able to do his work without a strong foundation in English.

The movement hopes to engage Internet-savvy young Singaporeans through Mr Brown's online story that uses social media such as blogs, Twitter and Facebook.

The movement's chairman, Mr Goh Eck Kheng said the idea is to show youth, who spend up to nine hours online every day, that they can write in good English and be entertaining at the same time. JOANNE CHAN
